DIPLOMATIC CORPS OF U. S. TO RESIGN

Action in Accordance With Custom of the Service—President Will Reappoint Many of Them.

(By Associated Press.) Washington, D. C., Nov. 17.—In accordance with custom in the diplomatic service, all American ambassadors and ministers abroad are expected to resign as a sequel to President Wilson's re-election and succession to a new term of office.

Many of them were appointed originally without special knowledge on their part of the peculiar requirements of their posts. Some had no intention of remaining abroad more than one term of four years. In other cases some who expected to make even shorter stays abroad have from force of circumstances, especially the exigencies of the present war, continued at their posts only to meet the wishes of the state department.

Foreign policies will engross a large part of President Wilson's attention in the immediate future to an extent never contemplated when he first assumed office. It is regarded as essential that in the development of the larger plans of the administration in foreign intercourse the President should have specially selected ambassadors and ministers to meet the demands in each case.

Fortunately the practice, which has become general in the American diplomatic service since President Roosevelt frankly requested the resignation of all of the ambassadors and ministers, will afford the President the necessary opportunity to carry out the plans he had projected involving a considerable reorganization of the diplomatic service so far as the heads are concerned.

That a considerable number of the incumbents will be asked to remain in office is a certainty, but some do not wish to remain and some have proved unequal to the heavy requirements of their stations. It is said that in the course of one of his informal talks to newspaper men some time ago the President had precisely this situation in the diplomatic service in mind when he remarked, "Some men grow in office and others swell up."

How This Family Makes Sausage.

In the November issue of Farm and Fireside a woman tells how her family makes sausage. She says:

"The ribs are taken out, shoulders, hams, jowls and sides blocked and trimmed into shape. We take the lean trimmings and add one pound of fat to five pounds of lean meat and grind fine, then thoroughly mix in salt, sage and cayenne paper to suit taste."

"If preferred, the entrails may be cleaned for casings. However, we use cotton casings from 12 to 14 inches long and of different widths. We pack the sausage in these cases, being careful to push the meat solidly down, as air spaces induce mold. These filled cases are hung up and smoked until the whole sack looks shriveled and cured."

"For summer use we sometimes fry and pack the sausage when fresh into stone jars and cover with hot lard. This I do not like to eat later than May. But when fried and put into tins and covered with its own hot grease and then sealed with paraffin, sausage will be as fresh in July as in December."

LIKE PIECE OF FAIRYLAND

Remarkable Cavern, Known as Shattuck Cave, Discovered When Miner Sets Off Blast.

A blast in the Shattuck mine in Arizona, set for the purpose of bringing down ore, was responsible for the discovery of a remarkable cavern, now known as Shattuck Cave, which has yielded unusual mineral specimens, some of the finest of which have been added to the collection at the Michigan College of Mines.

When the miner who had been working in that part of the 300-foot level returned with the night shift he found a great opening that reached farther than his light could penetrate. Looking upward, he could see tiny lights flashing, and, in the belief that they were stars, he ran back to the shaft and declared that he had blasted a hole clear through the surface.

On investigating the mine official found that the blast had opened a great circular cavern 345 feet in diameter and 175 feet high, which seemed like a piece of fairyland. On the roof, myriads of crystals reflected the lights from the miners' lamp. The walls, the roof and the floor were covered with great clusters of crystals, and near the center of the cavern a mass of stalactites, 40 feet long, hung from the ceiling like a great chandelier.

For the most part the crystals were pure white, but in places where the filtering waters had contained iron and copper great transparent stalactites and stalagmites, some ruby red, others a clear emerald green or azure blue, added to the beauty of the scene. —Argonaut.

A Real Experience in Dressing Beef.

The November Farm and Fireside, the farm paper published at Springfield, Ohio, has an article about dressing beef. The writer says:

"Perhaps our experience may help someone else to answer this question in a more satisfactory manner. There stood in our barn a short time ago a very fine corn-fed steer for which my husband asked $50. Several butchers looked the animal over and one of them offered $40 for it. Another said he would give 5 cents a pound for it alive, but unfortunately we have no stock scales and so refused to sell without knowing definitely how much we would get."

"Finally we decided to butcher the animal ourselves and sell the meat as best we could. The two front quarters, weighing 381 pounds, sold at 8 cents a pound and brought us $22.48. One hind quarter, weighing 124 pounds, brought $11.78. The hide weighed 84 pounds which, at 14 cents a pound, brought $11.76. The total received for all parts sold was $46.02, or $6.02 more than we had been offered for the animal alive."

"And remember that we still had left the other hind quarter, weighing 124 pounds, also the heart, tongue and liver, and we made about two gallons of tallow."

A waterproof electric motor has been invented by an Australian to drive brushes against the hulls of vessels to clean them without dry docking.

All Around.

During the severe storm that flooded the coast and caused some loss of life and much damage to property, an artillery officer, on leave of absence, telegraphed to his superior officer in command of the coast defenses at that point:

"Sympathy to the regiment; where are my clothes?" The answer he received was: "Sympathy from the regiment—you have no clothes."—Exchange.
